Petra: The vermilion city of Petra, which is often described as the eighth wonder of the world, is undoubtedly Jordan's most precious treasure and its most visited tourist site. A vast city carved out of stone by the Nabataea's, an ingenious Arab people who settled in Jordan more than 2,000 years ago. It was a strategic crossroads at the junction of the silk and spice trade routes connecting China, India and southern Arabia to Egypt, Syria, Greece and Rome. You will take the unique entry point of the city, the Siq. It is a narrow gorge 1km long. This path can be taken in a horse-drawn carriage or on donkeys. You will then fall on the Treasury, the royal tombs, the court, the temples, the amphitheater, the church.

The Siq: is the main entrance to the ancient Nabatean city of Petra in southern Jordan. Also known as Siq, it is a dim, narrow gorge and winds its way approximately 1.2 kilometers and ends at Petra's most elaborate ruin, Al Khazneh. A wide valley outside leading to the Siq is known as the Bab as-Siq

Al-Khazneh: is one of the most elaborate temples in Petra, a city of the Nabatean Kingdom inhabited by the Arabs in ancient times. As with most of the other buildings in this ancient town, including the Monastery, this structure was carved out of a sandstone rock face.
